PINE CHRISTMAS-TREE WEATHER.

The Christmas Tree is a form of vegetation which thrives best in a cold and nipping gan to blow. air, and with a thick layer of snow warming its roots. Such cutting weather stirs the human heart to a warm pity for those who are left defenselessly exposed to its brunt, and one need not be a dendrologist to know that the sap which circulates through a Christmas Tree and makes it blossom into gay and cheering fruit for the little masters and misses is drawn from the hearts of men.

Such weather should stimulate every kind soul to a new effort for THE EVENING WORLD's Christmas Tree. Remember that when this gracious scheme of THE EVEN-ING WORLD is spoken of as the tree, the singular number is only a form of speech. There will be half a dozen trees, to say the least, in as many different places.

So there is a large field for vigorous and generous effort, and the time left in which to exercise it is very short, and every moment is becoming less. Don't wait any longer! You do not want this sweet event in the lives of hundreds of poor children to come to pass without feeling that your good nature and your ready purse have been contributing thereto.

Send, then, something to help along the Christmas Tree for the tittle ones of Poverty. Again be it said that large contributions, though worthily made and most gratefully received, are not required. A modest donation is quite in order. It is the number of the givers, not the size of the gifts, which will make the trees groan under their plenteous weight of joy-bestowing

THAT MARVELLOUS LYMPH.

It is extremely gratifying to observe the prudent caution with which the majority f the medical experimenters with Dr. Koch's remedy are proceeding. From the start, the need of going slowly has been is still on trial, and that it can be fully accepted only after many and varied and successful experiments.

The younger Dr. Loomis, who has just reto visit Kocn and obtain a vial of the precious stuff, expresses himself so admirably that these words of his are worthy of quotation. They should express the mind of

Go slowly, then ! Provided there be prudence in the experiments, there cannot be too many, nor can medical energy be better employed than in thoroughly sifting the im which Dr. Kocu makes for his lymph. This is a point which demands settlement in the interests of civilization and humanity.

is little doubt that, having stepped off, the robbers politely raised their silk hats to the astonished lady passengers, stepped into their waiting carriage and were driven to their luxurious apartments. Notice the habiliment, if you please—silk hats and diamonds. No mean, ragged, low-browed knave, but gentlemen of taste and elegance, fastidious in their dress, gal-lant in their manner—in short, the very jewels and editions-de-luxe of robbers. That is the sort that Chicago beasts of now. Nowhere else in the world has the
